

Ad 1: Waitress Asked

Lyrics:

[Verse]

Ten men under the mistletoe?
Girl, no they didn't, no
It's every video on my phone
Bought it anyway, though

[Pre-Chorus]

Pure Instinct
One little swipe before the snow
Mango, honey, vanilla, musk
Only smells this way on me

[Chorus]

Christmas party, in I go
No one under the mistletoe
Then the waitress leans in slow
Wait, what are you wearing?
Not a love potion, but close
[End]

Primary text:

Last December I wore my most expensive perfume to three Christmas parties. Not one person said a word about it.

I even asked my friend in the car, can you smell me? She leaned in and went, "oh yeah, nice."

That was it. Forty minutes getting ready and I may as well have skipped it.

And look, I wasn't asking for much.

I've seen the videos where some girl puts on a pheromone perfume and ten men walk up to her.

Girl, no they didn't. And I never wanted ten men anyway.

I just wanted one person to notice I'd walked in.

So this year a friend told me about the pheromone perfume she wears.

She said don't go by what the videos say, just try it yourself.

It's mango, honey, vanilla and musk, in a little roll-on.

That's why I got the Pure Instinct Original, the one that started it all.

It blends with your own chemistry, so it smells a little different on everyone.

One swipe before my work party.

Ten men did not show up, obviously. The waitress did.

She stopped with a full tray of drinks, leaned in and said "wait, what are you wearing?"

Then she got her phone out and ordered it before I'd finished saying the name.

I thought about that the whole way home. A stranger with her hands full stopped to ask about me.

I read the reviews after, and one says "Had a waitress ask me what perfume I was wearing and order herself one!"

The Original has 1,178 reviews and 4.73 stars, so it's not only me.

Order now if you want to get this before Christmas.

Ad 2: Longer Hugs

Lyrics:

[Verse]

He hugs me like his coworker
One arm, phone in the other
Mistletoe up, he walks right through
One second, two, his arm is gone

[Pre-Chorus]

So I got myself an early gift
Pure Instinct
One little swipe by the tree
Mango, honey, vanilla, musk
It blends right in with my skin

[Chorus]

Key in the door, snow on his coat
Drops his phone, both arms
One, two, three, four, still here
Babe, you smell so good
Longer hugs on my Christmas list
[End]

Primary text:

My boyfriend hugs me like I'm his coworker.

You know the one. One arm, a little pat on the back, and his phone still in the other hand.

I timed it once. One second, two seconds, and his arm was gone.

And he's not a bad guy. He's just tired, and he's always on that phone.

But I missed the hugs from when we first got together, the ones where he wouldn't let go.

I even hung mistletoe in the doorway this year. He walked right under it.

So I stopped dropping hints and got myself an early Christmas gift.

A friend had told me about Pure Instinct, the Original, the one that started it all.

It's mango, honey, vanilla and musk in a little roll-on, and it mixes with your skin so it smells a little different on everyone.

One swipe on my neck while I was doing the tree.

He came home, went in for the usual pat, and stopped.

He actually dropped his phone on the couch.

Then I got both arms, and I counted to four before I gave up counting.

And he said, "babe, you smell so good."

I didn't say a word about the perfume. I just stood there and took the hug.

I read the reviews after, and one woman says her man is "always complimenting me on how good I smell."

The Original has 1,178 reviews and 4.73 stars, so it's not only me.

Order now if you want to get this before Christmas.

Longer hugs were the only thing on my list anyway.
